BLACK PEARL

Description

Black Pearl is extracted from a quarry in the Andhra Pradesh region, India. This granite has a relatively constant texture between blocks, but certain slabs may have larger and more apparent crystals in the composition. We can find a predominance of blacks with spots of black, gold, silver, brown, green and grey. Black Pearl is carved in large blocks, producing sizeable slabs with little to no variation, which makes it ideal for large projects as well as kitchen counters.

India started exporting high-quality black granites towards the end of the 1960's. The higher quality granites are very dense and have a constant colouration, including the black granites from southern India. There are over 80 quarries that produce black granites, spread out across 400 acres of land. Each quarry is about 2 and 20 acres each.
