COPENHAGEN

GRANITE

BRAZIL

COPENHAGEN

Description

Copenhagen is extracted in a quarry in Brazil. This granite has a soft cream background with spots of brown and black and gold accents. Its veining and motif are unique. Its dramatic appearance will enhance any kitchen or bathroom project. Copenhagen is ideal for traditional or rustic decors, respecting its country's essence. Not only does Brazil offer its visitors a fascinating culture, but its geodiversity enables it to create a stone such as Copenhagen that offers a warm and unique product that will have those who incorporate a parcel of this Brazilian jewel to their homes dreaming of the charm and warmth of Brazil.

In the course of the polishing process, an epoxy resin is applied to the stone's surface to fill part of its porosity (or pores) and natural cracks that may be apparent. This has no incident on the durability, the maintenance or the beauty of the natural stone. It is possible that certain pores are too small to contain efficiently the resin, and reopen during the finishing stages. However, this does not affect the stone's quality or beauty. Such as it is the case with many natural stones, it is recommended to apply a sealer to extend its beauty through time.
